

I firmly oppose allowing intelligence agencies to monitor internet connections, even for law enforcement purposes. Unlike phone or mail-based communication, a massive amount of one's personal life is stored, accessed, and modified via computer. Allowing unfettered access to such a medium would therefore strip individuals of ALL privacy, regardless of how non-invasive an investigation might want to be.